everyone went home with a card made from one of their own photos. The classes were a great success. It is also clear that we should be trying at least one intermediate level digital darkroom class next year.

There was also a workshop in Calgary in July. Norm went there alone, stayed into the next week to visit the company for which he consults and came home with one day to spare before we both flew off on August 1 to Karlsruhe, Germany, for another four month visit on Norm’s Alexander von Humboldt Fellowship. We arrived during the European heat wave and suffered for two weeks before things returned to something approaching normal.

For this visit, we were staying at the University’s faculty hotel, Gastdozentenhaus. It is located adjacent to a castle and park that are the focal points of Karlsruhe. It was a delight to us to run many of our errands on foot or by bicycle. We quickly became accustomed to an afternoon coffee, beer, wine and/or a meal—lunch or dinner—at one of the outdoor cafés.

Additional pleasures around Karlsruhe included hikes and bike rides across the French-German border, sometimes on our own, other times with our host, Peter Hubral and his wife Marlies.

We took a drive to Kolmar in Alsace and after a one-day stay, we slowly worked our
